* The image who says "Love!" is not related to a genuine god at all. The writer drew it as a symbol of many beings who order to love, such as, teachers, parents, consciences etc.

* This picture book is not about the teachings of 'Love your neighbors' or 'Love your enemies' in Christianity (The Holy bible).

There once was a man who believed that to love someone was good and the right thing to do.

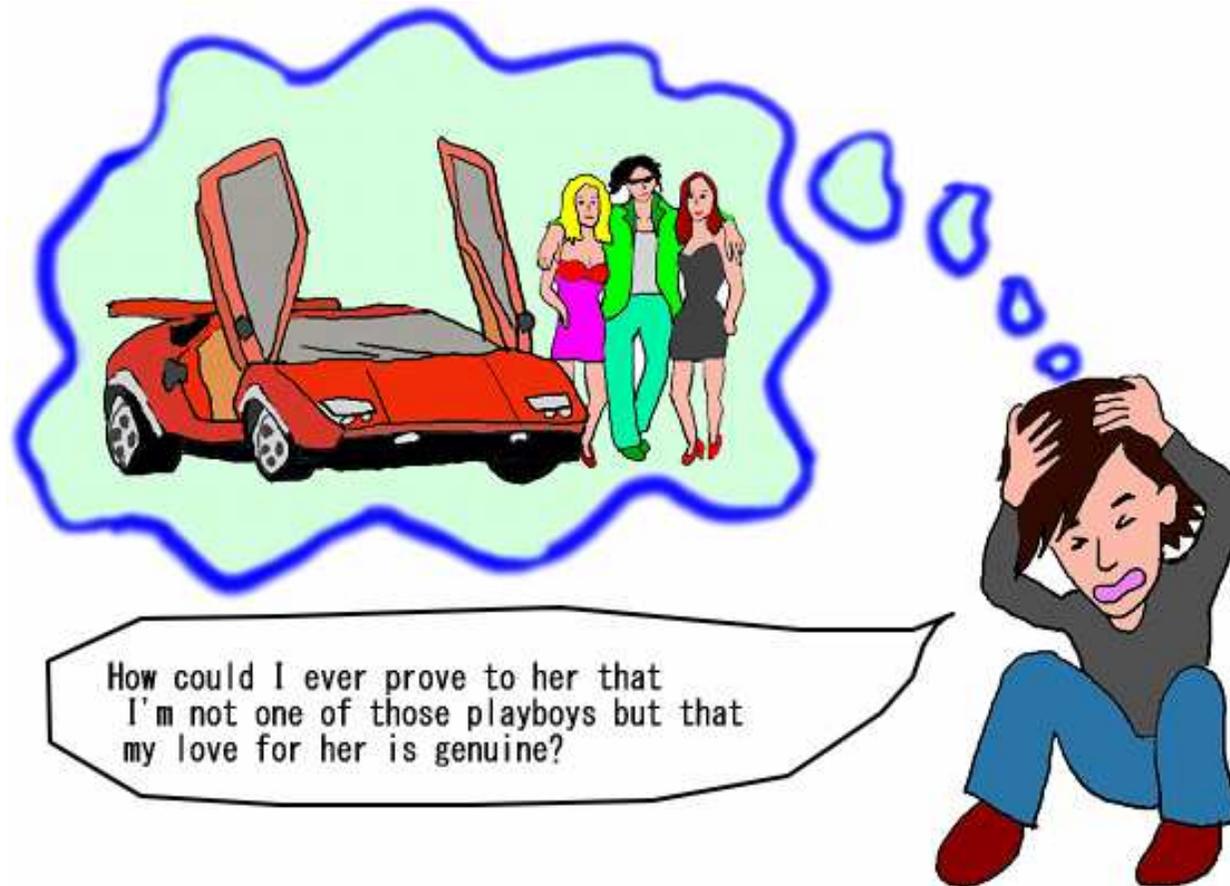

One day, the man fell in love.

What to do now? How could it be possible now to nurture the most important thing in the world? This couldn't be right.

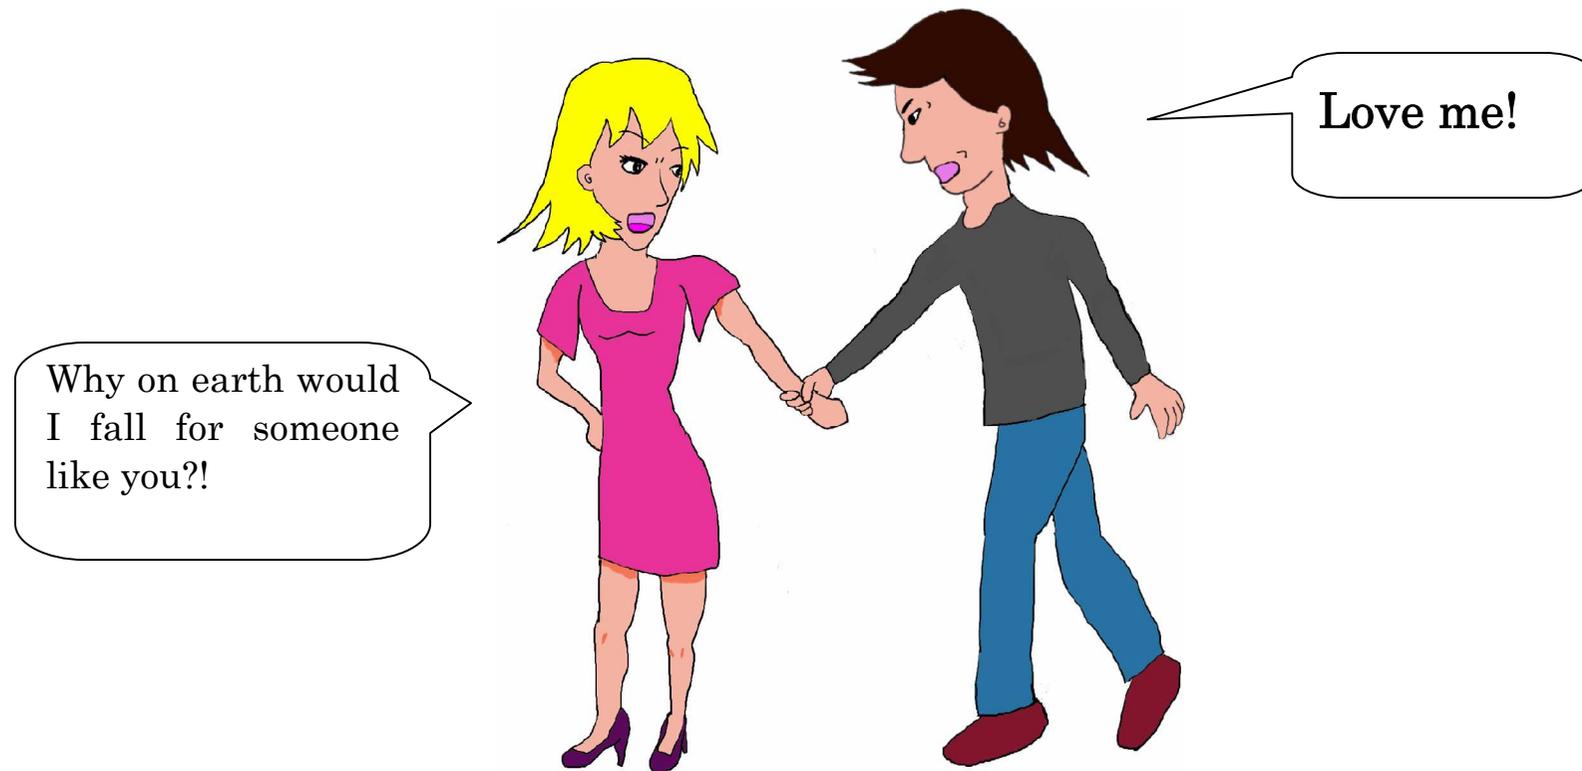

Perhaps the girl believed he had ulterior motives? After all, there are many people in the world who are deceitful and play around with people's hearts.

In order to prove that his love was real, the man decided to take various actions.

And so as a test, he demanded her love. After all, to demand something that is righteous must certainly be the right thing to do. The deceitful playboy wouldn't be able to do it, but for a guy whose love is genuine, he would be able to confidently act in a righteous manner.

But wait, the girl would not listen to his command. Could it be that she was still sceptical about his feelings? Could she possibly be possessed by some malignant spirits? Or perhaps she was an extremely shy kind of girl?

... but this wasn't going to be a problem. After all, love is fortified in the face of struggles and obstacles. The man waited for her in the dark of the night. This was a dangerous situation for him as well, but it was necessary to get across his real feelings to the one he loved. "I will have no regrets even when faced with death!" - Isn't this what real love ought to be?

There you go. Now it appears as though the girl finally realises that his love is truly genuine. Now the two of them will be able to strengthen their love together from now on.

He led the girl to a remote place and took her into an abandoned shack.

It was a place so far away that their love would not be jeopardised by anyone else.

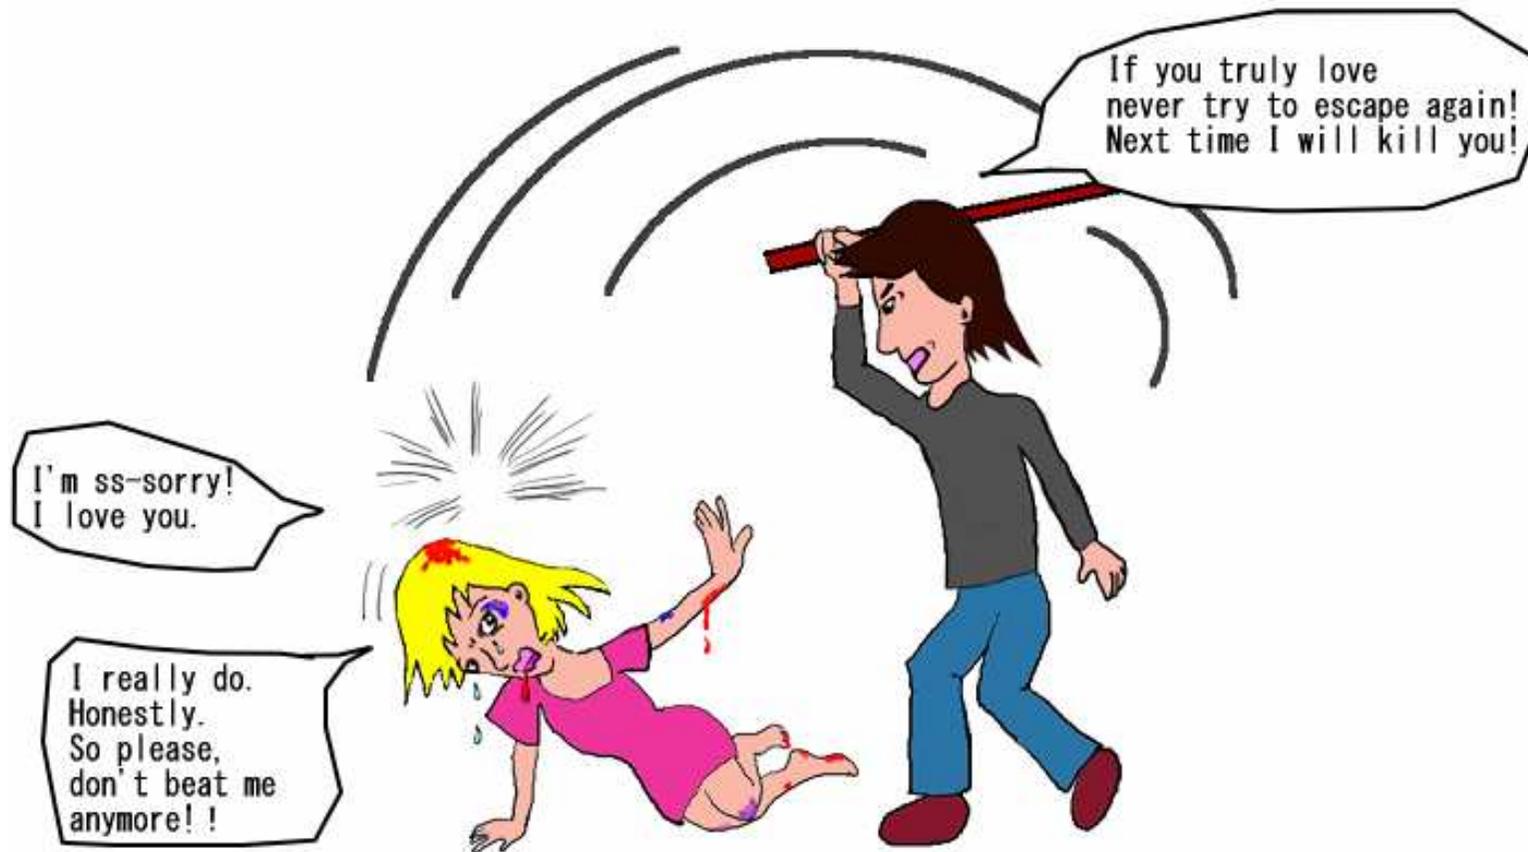

At times she would betray his love.

But of course, she could not get far away.

It goes without saying that betrayal is absolutely forbidden. There could be nothing worse than the betrayal of a love that is so true. And naturally, the bad must be punished.

The girl continued to express her love for him in tears. It seems that in order to strengthen love, one must instil fear and be demanding.

And so the man continued to threaten and beat the girl.

Dear you.

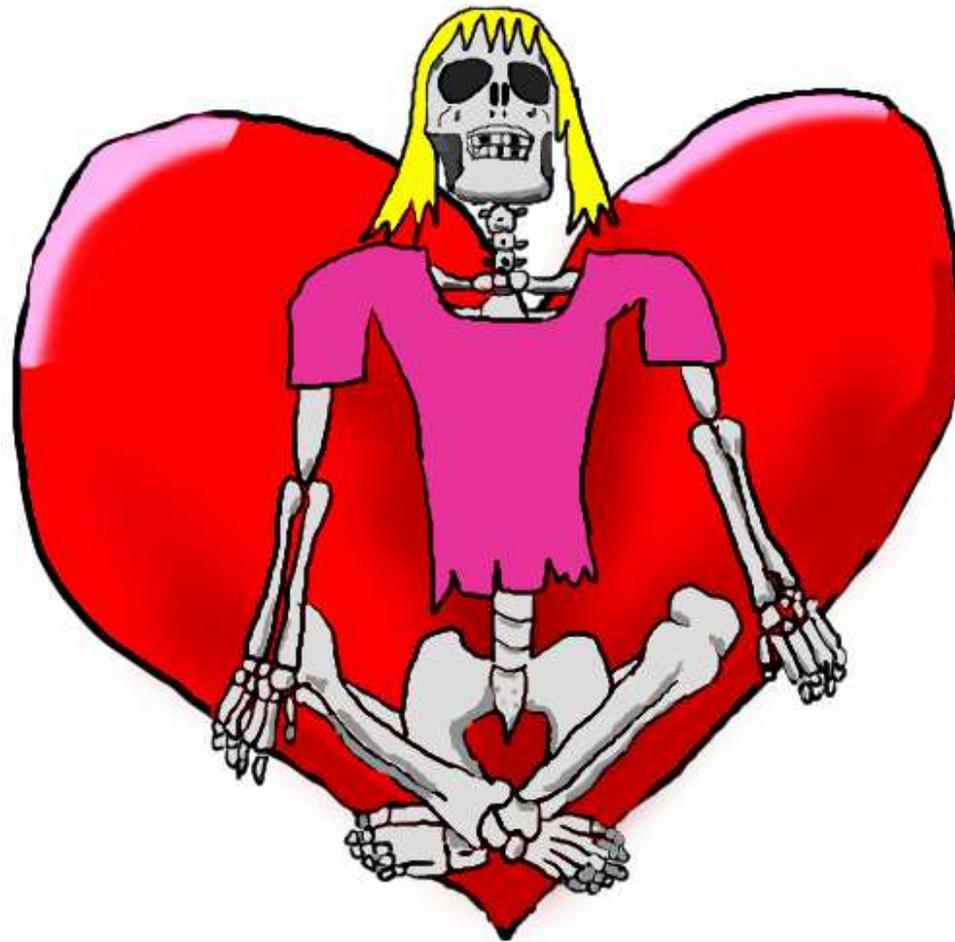

Many people in the world have this misunderstanding. You probably believe that all you are doing is trying so hard to strengthen the love between you and your partner.

But you know what? Love can't be born from good and evil, punishment, commands or through force. Even if you believe that the one you love is worth dying for.

Love can't be commanded.

What is born is not love,
but something very different.

Afterword -'Love Thy Partner'

There are many illusions/misunderstandings related to 'love'. These misunderstandings tend to cause various tragedies and accordingly countless people become sacrificed.

I have written this picture book with this misunderstanding as the theme, aiming to reduce these tragedies.
